Brooks Mancini, B.T. Mancini Co., Inc.

At the start, Brooks Mancini believed that the B.T. Mancini Co., Inc. needed to be diverse both in territory and products offered. To that end, the company has branches in San Jose, Sacramento, Fresno, Reno and Santa Rosa. Product offering includes floor coverings, metal decking and siding, computer floors, folding and operable partitions, marker boards and projection screens, fire doors and expansion joint covers. Secondly, B.T. Mancini Co., Inc. had women working in non-traditional construction jobs beginning in the mid 1970’s when a woman was hired to sell demountable office partitions. Today many of the company’s project managers are women. Thirdly, in 1986 when OSHA became law, not only did B.T. Mancini Co., Inc. write a Company Safety Plan but they hired a Safety Officer to see that the plan was adhered to. Safety was this person’s only job and was quite unusual for a company of this size. Lastly, though B.T. Mancini Co., Inc. has a fine banking relationship, they do all that is possible not to rely on bank debt. Therefore the company can withstand downturns in the economy. Brooks is particularly proud of the company’s people, most of whom have been with B.T. Mancini Co., Inc. for many years; he is proud of the projects that they have successfully completed.

Brooks strongly believes in the importance of community involvement and has served the community in various capacities, such as: Chairman of the Good Samaritan Hospital (1987-88), Chairman of the San Jose Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce (1986-92), Chair of the San Jose International Airport Commission (1997-2001), and Board Member of the Reno-Tahoe International Airport Authority (2007-2011).
